

Normative Dimension of Law' on the 3 and 4 June 2009 at the University of Antwerp, during which the majority of the papers were presented. The members of the advisory academic panel of the same organisation provided us with valuable suggestions throughout the organisation of the event, which made our task especially rewarding. Further, we are grateful to the many friends and colleagues who have contributed to this volume and, with their helpful remarks and comments, have both made possible and improved the overall work. In particular, we thank Triantafyllos Gouvas most warmly for his assistance and constructive attitude during the editing of this volume. Mel Hamill at Hart Publishing, in her effortless manner, has turned once again the huge task of production into fun.

Finally, we acknowledge the permission of Princeton University Press and Harvard University Press to reprint chapter five and portions of chapter one respectively.
